

Information About SNHU's MA.CMHC Program

Overview

- After a detailed review and careful consideration, SNHU decided to teach out the Master of Arts in Clinical Mental Health Counseling (MA.CMHC) program with a program closing date of June 1, 2028. The last cohort of students will begin the program on May 13, 2024, to enable our waitlisted students to join and complete the program. SNHU has ceased enrolling any new students in the program.
- The SNHU MA.CMHC program is accredited by the Council for Accreditation of Counseling and Related Educational Programs (CACREP).
- SNHU will teach out the program over a 4-year period, and during that time SNHU will continue to provide the required coursework as indicated in the catalog for our current MA.CMHC students, enabling all active student cohorts to complete the program.
- All accepted and current students will have the option of either completing their studies at SNHU or transferring to another institution to complete their degree requirements.
- While SNHU continues to provide a high-quality education in its MA.CMHC program, we understand that some students might find our timeline for completing the program by June 1, 2028, doesn't provide the flexibility they desire.
- SNHU has negotiated articulation agreements with two CACREP-accredited, online universities. SNHU is working with additional universities on similar agreements and will share out once finalized.
- SNHU has articulation agreements with Antioch University and Adler Graduate School. Each agreement is unique, and varies in the agreed-upon tuition rate, the number of credits the student can transfer, and which students are included in the scope of the agreement.
- Students with questions can contact their advisor or email counselingprograms@snhu.edu.

FAQs

Why are you no longer offering the counseling program?

SNHU regularly evaluates and updates programs to ensure they remain current and affordable, meet industry demand, and provide a high-quality education and a positive student experience. Upon review, we have made the decision to no longer offer the MA in Clinical Mental Health Counseling and will explore other ways to support our communities in the area of mental health.

You will continue receiving the same quality education, instruction and support as you have since the beginning.

Is the program still accredited?

Yes. The program is accredited through the Council for Accreditation of Counseling and Related Educational Programs (CACREP). SNHU is in the process of submitting its revised teach-plan to CACREP for their approval.

SNHU intends to make every effort to meet the accreditation standards and maintain CACREP accreditation for the MA.CMHC program.

Is SNHU ending its program early?

No. SNHU will continue to offer the same high-quality education, instruction, and support in our Master of Arts in Clinical Mental Health Counseling (MA.CMHC) program as we have since the beginning of your program through the program's closure date of June 1, 2028. However, for students who do not wish to complete the program at SNHU, we negotiated articulation agreements to make transferring easier.

What is a teach-out?

A teach-out is a plan for students to complete their academic program when the decision is made to cease admission to that specific program. In a teach-out, students must complete all program requirements by a certain date.

What are my options?

All accepted and current students in the MA.CMHC program will have the option of either completing their studies at SNHU or transferring to another institution to complete their degree requirements. Details about articulation agreements that SNHU has with other CACREP-accredited, online universities were recently shared.

What is an articulation agreement?

An articulation agreement is a contract that SNHU has with another institution that lays out a transfer plan for students interested in transferring.

Articulation Agreement Details

While SNHU cannot guarantee a student will be admitted to one of these universities or which credits will transfer, we will make the admission process and transfer of credits as
